

In tough times, the design industry treasures its vital resources.

This year, the architecture and design community demonstrated its regard for Metropolis with two major new awards. A great source of information and wisdom is more valuable to its readers than ever.

Horace Havemeyer, publisher

Jon Heng of Metropolis

Metropolis* Receives 2009 Institute Honors for Collaborative Achievement by The American Institute of Architects

"The AIA is privileged to confer this institute honor for collaborative achievement on Metropolis. Reaching a broad cross-section of design disciplines, touching all elements of design excellence, it speaks to elements and contextual innovation including but not limited to ecology insight, livability, and community development; in short, the spectrum of all goals of the architectural profession."

Metropolis* Honored as Architecture Magazine of the Year by the International Design Awards

"Metropolis, which has been serving the architecture and design professions for 28 years, leads the industry in sophisticated coverage of all aspects of architecture and design, and is known as the pioneering advocate of sustainable, collaborative design."

More Recent Accolades

Susan S. Szenasy, editor in chief named honorary member of the AIA NY Chapter, June 2009

Nominee for the National Design Awards, Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt, National Design Museum, 2007, 2008, 2009

The Society of Publication Designers award winners 1996, 2000, 2002-2009

The American Society of Magazine Editors* nominates Metropolis as finalist of the annual National Magazine Awards for General Excellence, the magazine industry's highest honor, 2008

The American Society of Magazine Editors* nominates Metropolis as finalist of the annual National Magazine Awards for General Excellence, the magazine industry's highest honor, 2007

Print Regional Design Annual award winners, 2001-2008

"One of the 50 best magazines" Chicago Tribune

"The architecture and design bible" NEWYORKPOST

"The brightest design magazine around" The Boston Globe